

FUNCTIONING OF NATIONS' LEAGUE TOLD BY PIAZZA

Bristol High Student's Examination Answers Made Public

COUNTY SECOND PRIZE

Structure of Assembly Explained, and Control of Various Matters

The paper prepared by Pompeo Piazza, 900 Jefferson avenue, in answer to the examination upon the League of Nations, conducted by the League of Nations Committee, is made public.

The Bristol young man is a student at Bristol High School, his paper winning second prize in Bucks County. The contest was nation-wide, with national, state, county and local prizes being presented the students of the schools.

Piazza's explanation of the functioning of the League is herewith set forth:

LEAGUE OF NATIONS EXAMINATION

Structure and functions of the Assembly, the Council, and the Secretariat, and special contribution of each to the League of Nations.

Assembly

(a) The Assembly up until December 31, 1931, consisted of 55 states. Each state shall have agreed to the Covenant of the League.

(b) The functions of the league are: appoints the Council and the Secretariat, passes on questions that have been brought to it through the Council. The Assembly also attempts to devise some means of arbitration. It asks the conflicting countries to cease aggressions. The countries then are free to choose: (1) Arbitration by mutual agreement; (2) Presentation of dispute to the World Court; (3) Presentation to Assembly.

If the question is brought to the Assembly, the Assembly receives from the Council a draft on arbitration. It is voted upon and must pass by a unanimous vote. If it does not, and receives only a majority vote, it then becomes a recommendation.

They have control over financial problems, and the distributing of the money.

Additions—I. Assembly opens under the presidency of the President of the Council.

II. Each member is allowed three representatives, and they are allowed one vote.

The Council

This body consists of fourteen members. Five of these Members are permanent. (The five world powers—France, Italy, England, Japan, and Germany). Nine members are non-permanent. It is elected by the Assembly, and its president changes every year, the president's chair being filled by each country in alphabetical order. It also:

(1) Apportion colonies or territories to mandates.

(2) Sanctions appointments made by the Secretariat to the various offices.

(3) Appoints Commissioner of Saar Valley and city of Danzig.

(4) Receives reports of the mandates.

In general, it receives the report of the various committees under its control.

The Secretariat

This organ is the Civil Service Office of the League. Its duties are mainly as follows:

(1) Registers and publishes all Treaties of Peace entered in by any member of the League.

(2) Appoints officers to the various sub-committees.

(3) Publishes the work of the League of Nations.

II.

Problems involved in limitation and reduction of Armaments.

There are numerous and various problems which must be considered in the reduction of Armaments.

(a) 1. The obligation of its members. Each state must respect, against external aggression, the integrity of the small independent nations. 2. All members desiring the rights of protection must agree to the Disarmament Obligations. The voice of the small nation is heard, showing a desire to enter into a pact of this kind. To them, it means bringing the armed forces of the larger Powers down to one standard.

(b) The technical problems involved are very complicated.

(1) Disarmament agreement limits the manufacture of implements of War to a certain degree. Then the wheels which are on the gun trucks, the axle-grease therein, the wool that goes to the clothing of the soldiers, the meat that goes for the nations are all considered implements of War.

(2) A more general draft must be drawn up.

(c) Political problems involved.

(1) After the war several treaties were agreed upon. The Disarmament Conference is in constant friction with some of these treaties. France, chiefly, is the one that will cause the most political difficulty.

ASK THAT POLLUTION OF CANAL BE STOPPED

Executive Committee of Canal Association Expresses Opinions

WORK FOR THE CAUSE

DOYLESTOWN, July 1.—An appeal to the residents of the Delaware Valley canal section, now being improved under the supervision of the State Department of Forests and Waters, to co-operate in an effort to eliminate the pollution of the canal waters, was made by members of the executive committee of the Delaware Valley Canal Association at a meeting at "Aldie," the home of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Mercer, Doylestown.

For a number of years the canal has been used as a "dumping ground" for garbage and many other undesirable things. The committee members realize that although the canal is now under the head of public waters, and consequently anybody caught polluting the stream is subject to arrest and fines, it will be only through public opinion that the pollution of the stream can be broken up.

Residents of the canal section are simply being asked by the canal association to cooperate with them in seeing to it that their neighbors as well as members of their own families do not violate the stream pollution laws. If the public would realize the importance of keeping the canal clean, more care would be exercised, the committee members believe.

J. Carroll Molloy, chairman of the executive committee of the association, reported that at the present time thirteen men are being employed by the Department of Forests and Waters, along the Delaware Valley canal. They are keeping the banks in condition and are clearing away all undesirable underbrush. This work is under the direction of H. H. Brouse, of Norristown. Four carpenters are busily engaged in repairing and rebuilding private bridges along the canal at the present time. The state bridges have been rebuilt by the state.

At considerable length the executive committee members discussed the conveyance of the canal property by the canal company to the state. The deed of conveyance is more or less vague, leaving somewhat in dispute just what property or ground was conveyed. (Continued on Page 2)

First Ballot Fails To Produce Votes Needed

By George R. Holmes (I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

STADIUM, CHICAGO, July 1.—(INS)—The first ballot taken on the presidential nomination in the Democratic national convention failed to give any of the nine candidates the required two-thirds majority.

Franklin D. Roosevelt had a clear majority of the convention with Alfred E. Smith the runner-up, and Speaker John Garner of Texas, third.

Governor Roosevelt was more than 100 votes short of the 770 required, even though Missouri, after first casting its entire 36 votes for James A. Reed, changed its vote after the completion of the roll call to 24 for Reed and 12 for Gov. Roosevelt.

The official first ballot totals were: Roosevelt, 666½; Smith, 291½; Garner, 90½.

It took almost two hours to complete the first ballot in the turbulent convention, due to disputes over instruction and demands for polls of the individual delegations.

The unprecedented spectacle was witnessed in a Democratic national convention of the leader of Tammany Hall asking the chair to poll the big New York delegation. John F. Curry made the request when New York was reached on the roll call.

"Why?" demanded the astonished chairman, Senator Walsh of Montana.

"Because," was the equally astonishing reply from John F. Curry, the Tammany leader, "I cannot ascertain the vote."

NO NOMINEE YET

Stadium, Chicago, Ill., July 1.—The third ballot of the turbulent endurance session of the Democratic National Convention this morning failed to produce a presidential nominee, neither candidate having received the required two-thirds vote. In the first and second ballots, the New York governor received a handsome majority of all votes cast but there was no two-thirds. He gained 16 votes on the second and third ballots.

WIDE SPLIT, PA. DELEGATION

Chicago, July 1.—Harmony was tossed into the scrap heap by Pennsylvania delegation as it split wide open in casting its ballot for a presidential nominee. Pennsylvania voted: First ballot: Roosevelt, 44½; Smith, 30; Ritchie, none; Baker, ½.

Second ballot: Roosevelt, 44½; Smith, 23; Ritchie, 3½; Absent, 4½. On the third and final ballot of the 12 hour session, the Pennsylvanians had somewhat subsided their rancor and were able to get together without the aid of the chairman of the Convention. The totals of this ballot were: Roosevelt, 45½; Smith, 21; Ritchie, 3½; White, 3; and Baker, ½.

Governor Roosevelt was more than a score of votes short of the "66 for Roosevelt in the first ballot" prediction voiced months ago by Joseph R. Duffey, Pittsburgh Democratic leader. The failure of the Roosevelt forces led by Duffey to pick up any more strength in the first and second ballots was something of a surprise.

TAKE $500 IN JEWELS

Williamsport, July 1.—Three men armed with a machine gun, smashed a display window of the Rudnitski Jewelry Store in the heart of the business district today, scooped up $500 worth of jewelry and fled.

A restaurant employee on the other side of the street was threatened with death when he made his appearance. One of the trio pointed the machine gun at him and ordered him back into the restaurant.

CONVENTION DEADLOCKED

Chicago, July 1.—The continuous session of 12 bitter hours left the Democratic national convention deadlocked today for the presidential nomination, with Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt stopped short of attaining the required two-thirds.

Three ballots were taken between 4 a. m. and 9 a. m. On the last one, the New York governor was only 86 votes short, having received 682 79/100, the number necessary for nomination being 768.

The delegates will return to the stadium at 8.30 tonight to resume the battle.

MRS. IDA APPLETON IS FOUND DEAD UPON BED

Well-Known in Lodge Circles; Instituted Camp 89, P. O. of A.

FUNERAL ON SUNDAY

Known as the "Mother of the Camp," Mrs. Ida Tomlinson Appleton, who instituted Camp 89, Patriotic Order of Americans, died at the home of Miss Frances Landreth, Radcliffe street, early last evening. The lifeless form of Mrs. Appleton was found upon the bed in her room by Miss Landreth.

Well known in lodge circles was the Bristol woman, who was likewise past president of the P. O. of A.; past president of the Philadelphia-Bucks District, No. 7, of the order; a past officer of Shepherds Delight Lodge, Shepherds of Bethlehem; and vice-president of Ladies' Auxiliary of the America, Hose, Hook and Ladder Company, No. 2.

Wednesday evening the late Bristol had attended a session of the P. O. of A. here. She had suffered with heart trouble for a time, having secured the services of a physician on Monday.

Mrs. Appleton talked with Miss Landreth, at whose home she was employed, yesterday, at 3.45 p. m., telling her she felt much better. A half hour later Mrs. Appleton answered a summons at the door. When Miss Landreth entered the dining room for dinner at 6.30 she could not find Mrs. Appleton, and upon making a search found the lifeless form on the second floor.

The late Bristol woman had made her home in Bristol for about 39 years. She is the widow of Charles Appleton, and is survived by one son, Clifford Appleton.

Rev. Paul R. Ronge, pastor of Zion Lutheran Church, will conduct the funeral service from the home of the son of the deceased, 337 Walnut street, Sunday, at 2 p. m. Burial in Bristol Cemetery will be under direction of H. S. Rue Estate, undertakers. Friends may call Saturday evening.

Y. P. B. Will Hear of The State Convention

YARDLEY, July 1.—The Y. P. B. branch will hold a meeting July 8th at the home of Marguerite Beener, Afton avenue, when reports of the convention will be given and plans completed for the County Y. P. B. picnic to be held at the home of Caroline Hershey, July 9.

The Yardley W. C. T. U. will hold its annual meeting and luncheon July 7, at the home of the president, Mrs. Jesse E. Harper. Those who expect to attend are requested to get in touch with Mrs. William H. Applegate not later than July 5th, at which time reservations close. Miss Gladys Harper will be present and give a talk on the state convention which she attended.

FINAL ISSUE OF BRISTOL'S NEWSPAPER, "BACHE'S INDEX," STATED SAME WOULD BE DISCONTINUED AS SUBSCRIBERS FAILED TO PAY FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS

Published by William Bache—Final Issue Gave Much Space to Approaching Conflict of North and South in 1861 —Items of Local Interest Tell of 15,000 Herring Caught in One Haul—Times Were Hard

(By "The Stroller")

Recently I had the pleasure of looking at the final issue of a Bristol newspaper, called "Bache's Index," which was published by William Bache, in the year 1861. The editorial stated that after a year of trial, the paper was to be discontinued because the subscribers would not pay their subscriptions.

The first newspaper in Bristol known as the Bristol Gazette, was published in 1849, by William Bache, who was the great grandson of Benjamin Franklin. It lived through 52 issues and met its death sometime in 1850, for want of adequate support. In 1854 a newspaper came into life in the borough, being published in the interest of the Know-Nothing political party, which was just then coming into existence. It was called the Bucks County American. It died with the decline of the party it was started to support. Following the death of the Bucks County American, Mr. Bache established the "Index."

William Bache is remembered by many of the older residents now living. His office was on the south side of Mill street, between Wood and Cedar streets. He and his family lived in the house situated on Otter street, just opposite the home of Frederick Leibfried. This house at the time he occupied it, was a very pretentious dwelling and made one of the most desirable homes in Bristol.

Mr. Bache had two daughters, who were teachers in the Bristol public schools. Miss Maggie married Henry Booz, who was in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and whose home was on Radcliffe street, adjoining that of Lewis T. Rodan. Miss Mary, the other daughter, married Parker Fine, who was the son of William H. H. Fine, proprietor of the Railroad House, and at one time, postmaster of Bristol.

Mr. Bache was also the father of two sons, Franklin and Walter. The former studied pharmacy and died in Florida a few years ago. Walter was a "rolling stone." In his young manhood he embarked on a vessel at Philadelphia, which was bound for Brazil, South America, but it foundered in the lower Delaware, with the loss of many lives. Walter saved his life by swimming ashore. A few years later, he sustained a fractured leg, in a cattle wreck on the P. R. R. at South Bristol. He was carried from the wreck on the door of a box-car. It was rumored sometime ago that he had died in California.

In 1853, William Bache wrote a history of Bristol. In its sixty pages is crowded an abundance of information about the early days of the town's history and the period of the Revolutionary War. A resume of the various businesses operated within the town in 1853 is recorded, and there is also a brief history of the Bristol Masonic Lodge, the Public School Buildings No. 1 and 2, and Washington Hall. Copies of this history are now so rare that recently a book store in Philadelphia offered a copy for sale at a price of twenty dollars.

INVENTORIES FILED IN BRISTOLIANS' ESTATES

Include Margaret Callahan and Maria Luigi Rago; Also Wilson Estate

SEVERAL FOR COUNTY AT WILLOW GROVE

In the estates of two Bristol residents, inventories have been filed at Doylestown, within the past few days. These include the estate of Margaret Callahan, $2075, and Maria Luigi Rago, $1290.

To Emily Baker letters of administration were granted in the estate of Fred Wilson, a former employee of Warner Sand and Gravel Company, total $121.50. The testator is said to have no relatives in this country.

Bequests of money, silverware, a safe and linens were contained in the will of the late Anna M. Richardson, of Northampton, who died June 13. It was learned today after her will was probated in the Register of Wills' office at Doylestown.

Horace Hogeland was named the executor of the estate valued at close to $7000. To the treasurer of the Union Cemetery Company, of Addisville, she provided a bequest for a trust fund of one hundred dollars, with the provision that the Richardson-Cornell lot be given perpetual care.

A granddaughter, Bessie Myers Brown, will inherit $100 and Anna Spencer Rodemich, another granddaughter, will receive $600. Three other grandchildren, Clinton Spencer, Florence Heavener and Horace Spencer were given $1500, which will be divided among them.

Other bequests included that of $500 to Cora S. Myers in addition to a silver watch and linens; Oliver Myers, who will receive silverware and $500; and George Richardson, to whom she gave a safe, silverware and the sum of $500.

The remainder of the estate will be divided equally among Bessie Myers Brown, Helen Myers, Lettie Brooks and Grace Carver, according to the will.

The $13,000 estate of Annie Moon, of Falls, who died June 14, will be divided equally among her nieces, Jennie, Lydia and Emma Moon and Mary F. Moore. Thomas G. Hawkes was named the executor of the estate.

S. S. "BRISTOL CITY" DOCKS IN PHILA.; NOW UNLOADING

British Freighter Makes Fast To Pier 98, South, Tidewater Terminal

REACH HERE MONDAY

Final Arrangements to Be Completed at Meeting This Afternoon

Warning To Swimmers

The committee arranging for the welcoming of the "Bristol City" as it passes here on the morning of July 4th advises against swimming in the river at this time the vessel is passing. This word of caution is given in order that there will be no danger of drownings. It is believed that the vessel will create considerable swell in the river, and swimmers not being familiar with the swell from boats as large as the "Bristol City" may be caught in it and drowned.

Parents are requested to caution their children, and all swimmers are urgently requested not to enter the river during the time stated.

The S. S. "Bristol City" docked this morning in Philadelphia, Pier 98, South, Philadelphia Tidewater Terminal, according to a statement made by the officials of the Bristol City Lines, at the Philadelphia offices this morning.

A meeting of the company officials along with the captain of the vessel is to be held this afternoon at which time definite arrangements will be made for the trip up the Delaware to Trenton, on the morning of July 4th.

The boat is being unloaded of a portion of her cargo and will then begin preparations for the trip up the river to Trenton, where she will discharge 2500 tons of china clay, the remainder of her cargo.

Arrangements will be made with the Bristol City Lines, this afternoon, by Clarence W. Winter. Mr. Winter will use his yacht to draw alongside of the freighter and Dr. J. Fred Wagner, president of Borough Council, will hand aboard a basket of flowers as greetings to the captain of the ship. There will also be a letter of greeting from Clifford L. Anderson, Burgess of Bristol, Pa., to the Lord Mayor of Bristol, England.

CLEW IS FOUND

Philadelphia, July 1.—Detectives investigating the murder of Regan, shot down in an apartment house here yesterday by an unknown assassin, were believed to have their first tangible clue given by the dead man's mother, Mrs. Mary Regan. The aged woman told detectives a car bearing four men of foreign appearance passed her home on Wednesday afternoon. One of the men, she said, leaned far out of the car as if to see the number of her house more clearly. She gave the detectives a good description of the man and said she would be able to identify him if he were brought before her. Regan's wife, Mrs. Agnes Curry Regan is the former wife of Joseph Curry who was electrocuted for his part in the Olney bank robbery here.

TO CONDUCT SERVICE

All members of P. O. of A. will meet at Walnut and Pond streets tomorrow evening at 8.15 for the purpose of conducting funeral services for the late Ida K. Appleton.

See the S. S. "City of Bristol" from the lawn of Mary Ancker's river-front room, 916 Radcliffe street. Refreshments, sandwiches or regular meals served gratis.—(Adv.)

FEWER MARRIAGES

When poverty enters the door, love flies out the window, or at least postpones its consummation in marriage until better times. Marriages increase with general prosperity and decrease with unemployment and diminishing incomes.

Forty of the 48 states show an aggregate slump in marriages last year of 37,000, compared with 1930. And the 1930 figures were below normal. Only eight states showed an increase of marriages per 1000 of population, and these gains were largely due to new marriage laws in neighboring states which make it easier to cross the state line to have the knot tied.

While marriages were growing fewer in number divorces were doing likewise and for the same reason. The 40 states surveyed reported 5,456 fewer divorces, which is about in the same proportion as the drop in marriages.

If data on the subject were obtainable, it would undoubtedly show a weakening, under current economic conditions, of the temptation to married couples to separate upon small provocation. Two can live cheaper together than apart, and when jobs are scarce and uncertain that feeling of independence, which permits husbands and wives to consider separation, is seldom present. The unemployed wife knows she is dependent upon friend husband, and husbands whose wives have earning power or independent incomes know not how soon they will be dependent upon them.

So it comes to pass that Old Devil Depression is just about as potent today as Dan Cupid in Dan's own specialty.

FURLONGS FOR JOBBOLDERS

All of the debating over the question whether congress should cut Federal salaries or specify compulsory furloughs without pay seems like splitting hairs. To most persons there is between the two schemes a distinction without a difference.

As a matter of fact there are two essential differences in principle between the furlough plan of payroll reduction and the straight salary cut. Both diminish the employee's earnings by approximately the same amount, but, whereas under the furlough he receives full pay for all service rendered, Uncle Sam, the straight cut method requires 12 months of service for 11 months of his former pay.

From the viewpoint of labor the other argument for the furlough is more convincing. With a standard pay rate maintained under the furlough plan, the jobholder may be more readily reestablished at full earning power upon the return of normal times.

Washington has been preaching the spreading of work and the furlough as an alternative for pay cuts and here is an opportunity to practice one of its preachments. The White House would have it so, but it must first have its way with certain elements in Congress, who may eventually surrender to wise counsel if for no other reason than that the furlough plan performs a painful duty with the least pain.

By this time Gaston Means probably has sold his fellow prisoners passes to freedom.

veyed to the state. There is no mention made of the lock houses or any other buildings along the canal, in the deed of transfer. It is the desire of the canal association to work in conjunction with the State Department of Forests and Waters to see to it that buildings along the canal or ground nearby are not used for undesirable refreshment stands. The canal association, Mr. Molloy pointed out, is not working as a board of censors but as an auxiliary to the state department.

Members of the canal committee will be glad to receive at any time any helpful criticism, it was further pointed out. Because of the committee's close contact with the Department of Forests and Waters, it is believed that action will follow any reasonable request.

The committee also announced that service or civic clubs of Bucks County that desire to learn more about the work of the canal association can secure speakers for their meetings by applying to J. Carroll Molloy at his office in Doylestown.

"EMBERS OF LOVE"

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

COPYRIGHT 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

CHAPTER FORTY-TWO

"I want my baby!"
"But, darling child, you've been so sick—"

"I want him. I want him!" Lily Lou, quick to see that she could get what she wanted now, beat the coverlet with her white, claw-like hands.

When they hesitated, looking with distress from one to the other, the first suspicion of what might have happened, dawned on her.

Then there was a reason . . . the little baby that she wouldn't look at at first was gone . . . had slipped away from her before she had let herself love him . . .

She lay back on her pillow, her eyes closed. The old impulse to hide. To keep them from knowing that she cared. They must not guess . . . her baby, hers and Ken's . . .

"When did it die?"
She opened her eyes, brought the words out baldly, looking Herr Doctor straight in the eye. He started, and Madame Nahlmann gave a little cry. The sisters looked from one to the other . . . they were not sure what she had said.

And suddenly she could not bear it. She burst into harsh, strangled sobs, sobs that tore themselves out of her, the sobs of the defeated and lost.

She felt them crowding around her, offering comfort, but she could not accept it. There was nothing left to her . . . nothing . . . Until the rosy sister brought the baby, his dark little face looking strangely flattened and pinched, like a sick little old man.

"He was ill, the poor little thing," Madame Nahlmann said. "When you got sick, he got sick, too, and so—"

But Lily Lou did not listen to them. She took him in her arms, and held him close to her heart, smiling at them triumphantly through her tears.

She did not remember them taking him away. But when next she remembered things, they brought him back to her, and she knew that her troubles were over . . . the baby would get well . . . she'd get well . . .

Overnight the hospital changed from a place of torture infested with strangers, who pushed and prodded and did unthinkable things to her, to a haven of safety inhabited by ministering angels.

She could lie on her soft white bed . . . so safe, so drowsily content, and know that the bubchen was close at hand, that she had only to lift her eyes and Schwester Schnabel or Schwester Wolfe would be right there.

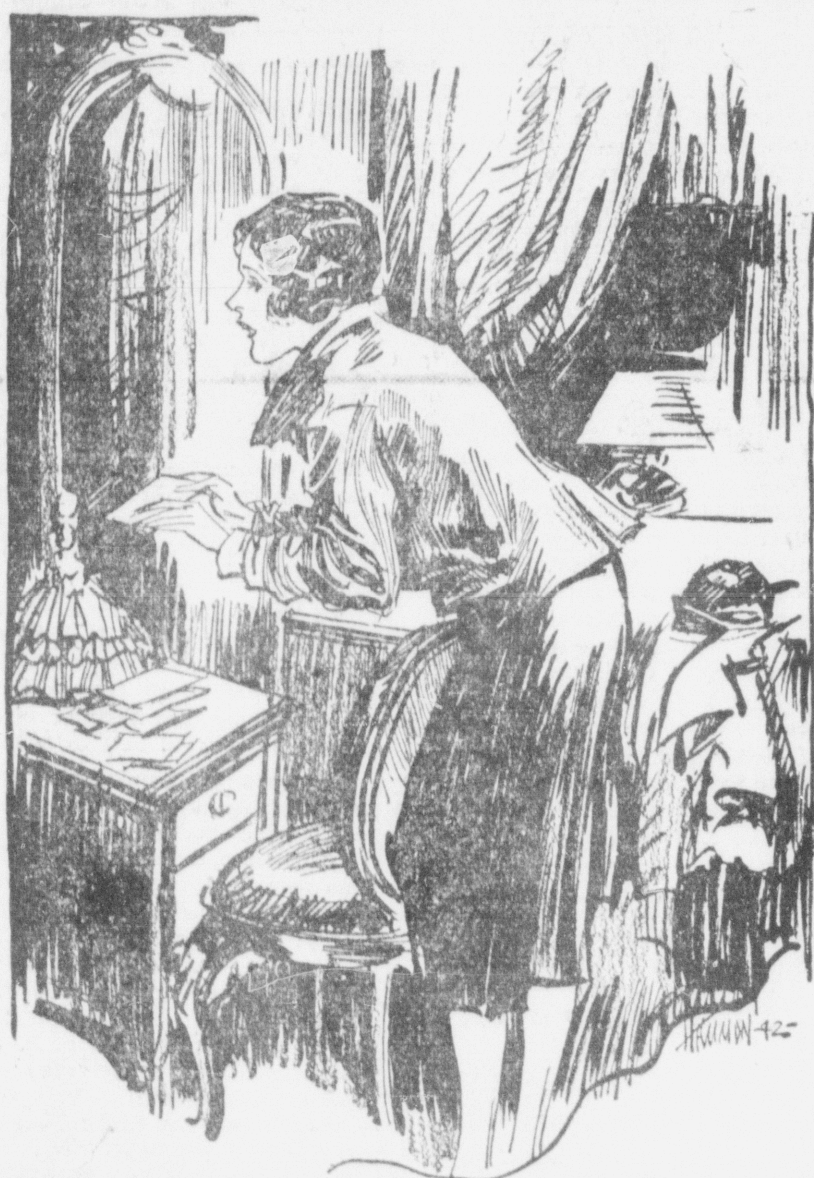

Warm April sun filtered in the sparkling windows. A milky blue sky was just visible beyond the roofs and spires. They had seemed grey before, but now they were silvery or fawn-colored, or opalescent in the sun.

When they saw she was interested in the view they dragged her bed close to the window, with a proper accompaniment of Viennese grunts and whistling breathing.

Then she could see the people passing on the street, and when an old woman took up her stand at the corner to sell balloons she sent for a red one, and clapped her hands and laughed aloud because she was sure the bubchen noticed it, and followed it with his eyes.

Kind Doctor Sanders came every day, patted her hand, and told her she must be careful not to get too fat, isn't it so, no? Chuckling delightedly at his own joke.

Madame Nahlmann came often,

On the dresser was a little pile of letters. With a presentiment of bad news she ripped open the first one.

with armfuls of lilac and syringas, which the obliging sisters stuffed into bulging but strangely incommensurate vases. "You'll be coming home in a day or two now, Lily Lou—and then we'll be off to Paris, as soon as Doctor Sanders thinks you can travel. I've finished my season at the opera house."

Madame Nahlmann had finished her season . . . and Lily Lou hadn't even heard her . . . hadn't heard one of the concerts either. . . . Where all the time had gone to . . .

She didn't want to leave the hospital. She didn't want to leave Vienna. Why, she hadn't seen a thing! They let the rosy sister, Schwester Schnabel, come home with her for the 10 days that were left before it was time to go back to Paris.

Lily Lou's strength came back in bounding rushes of renewed vitality and joy of living. She felt better than ever. She loved everybody and everything. She wanted to kiss each rosy-cheeked child she saw in the parks, to endow each beggar with a fortune. She adored the cafes, where everyone ate outdoors on round tables with green painted iron chairs. She gorged on wild strawberries, drowned in billowing whipped cream, tried 50 kinds of little cakes, each more delectable than the other. And the coffee! Oh, wouldn't mother and the church ladies enjoy a cup of real Viennese coffee, with whipped cream on top. . . .

She almost wept when Susanne told her how gay the opera season had been, and what a marvelous day Easter was, with the streets fairly exuding holiness, and each white-veiled little girl and black-coated little boy, driving in a one-horse shay, all decorated with flowers, to church to make their first communion.

Six weeks . . . just gone out of her life. . . .

They went back to Paris. There was the French bonne that Madame Nahlmann had promised for the baby, a tall, pink-cheeked peasant woman, with many petticoats and an amazing edifice of starched lace and streamers on her head, waiting to take him off in triumph, and Lily Lou, trying not to mind, and keeping an ear cocked for possible protest from the bubchen, went into her room to take off her things.

For a moment she stood looking around the familiar little place with a sort of happy homesickness. After all, it was as much home as any other place. She hadn't liked it before, but she hadn't liked Vienna at first either. It seemed to take her a long time to get used to things. Maybe that was because she came from a little town. Maybe she should have stayed in Woodlake, and sung in the choir, and married somebody like Bert Bartells. . . .

She glanced at her reflection in the mirror. Saw a tall, incredibly slender young woman in a Vionnet coat and an Agnes hat, her lips reddened, her eyes faintly but perceptibly touched up. . . .
Lily Lou turned from the mirror, flung the expensive hat on the bed. On the dresser was a little pile of letters that had not been forwarded. With a presentiment of bad news she ripped open the first one.

Uncle Eph was dead. He had died in his little house up on Lone Mountain.
May didn't say how he had died. "He died," she wrote, "and he left a will, and everything he had is to go to you. I suppose it amounts to about a thousand dollars. No doubt you can use it, but it seems funny, leaving it all to you. After all, you are not the only one in the family."

The League of Nations has entrusted the Council with the duty of drawing up a draft affecting Disarmament. Then a Disarmament Conference was held, but nothing was accomplished in the way of International Disarmament, although other important measures were taken.

III.

Passage taken from the third question.

(A) If two countries, as a means of settlement of dispute, resort to war, the League offers them a basis of conciliation. The countries are asked to cease combats and aggressions for 3 months. Then they may:

(a) refer to means of Arbitration that they may jointly decide upon.

(b) they may take their controversy or dispute to the World Court at The Hague.

(c) finally, they may refer to the League of Nations directly through the Council.

In the case that one country continues its aggressions while the other is willing to present the dispute to the League or the Court, that country shall be judged as breaking the Covenant of the League of Nations and causing a breach of International Agreement.

(B) In my belief the strongest weapon which the League has is, as M. Benes stated, the "public opinion of the World." The Assembly stated in the Unanimity Rule that no country would be forced to do anything against its will. Therefore, the exclusion of communication, transit, exports, imports and financial assistance, would mean that a means of forceful submission was in action. As the League stated that it could not attempt to force its members into agreements, this would necessarily be an unjust act. However, when the public opinion of the World is brought to the front, they may do as they please or as their opinions favor, providing that they also do not break the Covenant of the League. If they deem that the exclusion of exports, imports, communication, transit and finance from the aggressive country, allow them to do so. But, do not allow the opinions of the various members to become united into the forceful submission, unless in the breaking of some treaty.

IV.

International Problem on Health
(a) The League has established a Hygiene Center in Paris where different countries have the privilege to meet and exchange information on health and hygiene.

(b) Standardized the sale, manipulation, and administration of drugs.

(c) Suggested ways and means to better the Quarantine systems.

(d) Sent corps of medical experts to the different countries where the scourge of disease was acting. (As in Indo-China,—the leprosy), to ascertain the causes and to arrive upon some definite solution for the cure, and methods of prevention.

(e) Got Bolivia and China during Epidemics to agree to a more rigid quarantine.

(B) Problems of Mandates

(a) The League apportions mandates over certain colonies or territories known as mandates. After a certain number of years, the mandate submits to the League, a statement, stating that the mandatory is now able to govern themselves. A plebiscite is then taken to determine how they shall be governed in the future.

(C) Problems of Finance

The Finance Committee drafts the causes why the country wants financial assistance. It is then voted upon and if passed, a sum of money is granted to the country in distress. However, the country must agree to allow the League full supervision and authority over the reestablishment of the financial conditions.

After the war, Austria was in dire straits and asked the League for assistance in her financial difficulties. The League sent a committee to study the ways and means of reconstruction. They agreed to take over the work if Austria would agree to give the League full supervision. Austria agreed and the League went to work and put her on a firm financial basis.

In this way, the League deals fully with all questions. They have access to larger sums of money, access to more experts than could be found in one single country.

Handling of these questions by one single country.

(a) The Health Question.

The problem would be almost impossible to handle due to the enormous cost, the large personnel in medical and hygiene experts, and the distances that must be traveled to the field of disease and the number of countries needing assistance at the same time.

(b) The Finance Question.

If one single country should attempt to reorganize the financial condition of a country, the outcome would be disastrous due to several reasons.

(1) Interest of world not to be the aim but just the one country affecting the loan.

(2) High interest would be charged.

(3) The lending nation could not affect the means as well as the Financial Committee, which is composed of a number of men from all over the world.

(c) The Mandate.

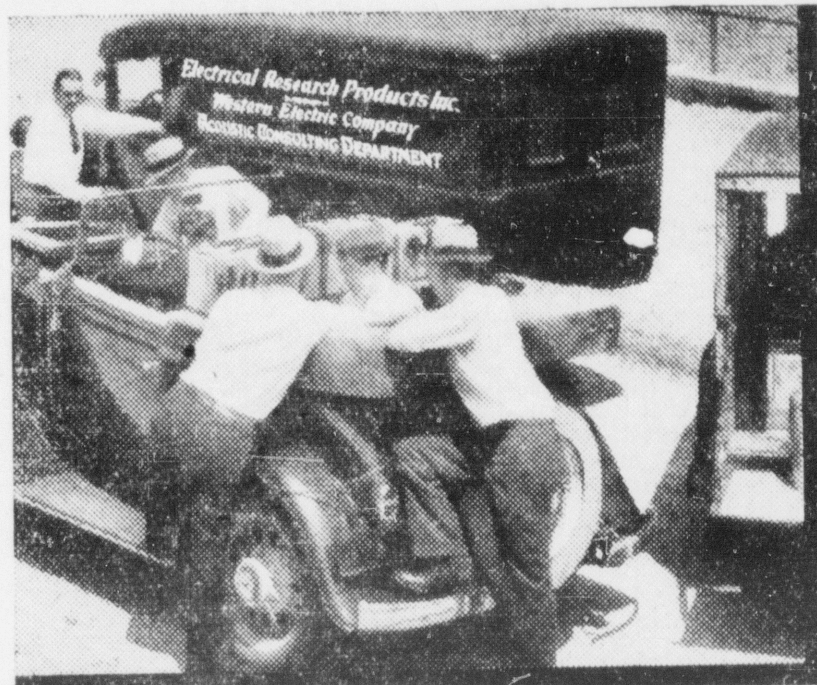

A country, if it has charge or control over a colony, especially if that colony is rich in industry and agricultural products, will not, seeing it is a good source of revenue, give that colony the right of plebiscite. They will endeavor to keep them under control and not to allow them their independence.

This all tends to show that League, is at all times, seeking to promote international co-operation and international peace and security. It also shows that the League as a whole is more powerful, exact and assuring on any question, due to the vast number of men in it, than any part or member of it.

You can't fool the "Electric Ear..."

New TYDOL wins anti-knock road Test of 17 gasolines

Test car with analyzer and sound recording units... Equipment truck of the Western Electric Company... ready to test 17 gasolines bought in the open market.

Electric Ear GIVES VERDICT
With amazing new sound-recording equipment, engineers triple-check true knock-rating of 17 gasolines on the road... New Anti-Knock TYDOL wins.

* ELECTRIC EAR KNOCK CHART

The "ELECTRIC EAR" is the popular name for the new and amazingly accurate instruments which record sound in decibels. The "Electric Ear" was perfected by the Electrical Research Products, Inc. These same super-sensitive instruments were used by the Noise Abatement Commissions of America's leading cities.

This test conducted and computed by

A DECIBEL is an engineering unit denoting volume and intensity of sound. In these tests, lowest decibel rating (new Tydol) indicates best anti-knock gasoline.

A HOT engine, a heavy load, a steep hill—there's the real test of anti-knock quality. Laboratory knock ratings are apt to go hay-wire under these real road conditions—as every motorist knows.

So the new Sound Meter—the "Electric Ear" of the Electrical Research engineers—made this amazing test on the road, the first of its kind.

It caught every knock in each of 17 gasolines—all non-ethyl gasolines, all bought in the open market from road-side stations. It registered that knock. Hour after hour, for 3 days, the "Electric Ear" checked and triple-checked every gasoline.

Same car. Same load. Same speed. Same grade... but what a difference in knock rating! Look at the decibel chart. You'll see where the New TYDOL stands—It heads the list in real anti-knock quality.

The chart doesn't show its speed and pick-up; its instant-starting, its super-power and extra mileage. But your first trial run will show them to you—plainly.

Try it today. Against any gasoline. And get extra-fare transportation at the regular price.

Final Issue, "Bache's Index," Gave Reason For Discontinuance

a member of the family or a descendant living in the town.

From a perusal of the "Index" it was found that many of the subscribers had failed to pay their subscriptions, and this was the real reason for its discontinuance. That Bache possessed a sense of humor can be gleaned from his facetious reference to these delinquent subscribers:

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said—
'I will my Country paper take,
Both for my own and family's sake?'
If such there be let him repent,
And have the paper to him sent!
And if he'd pass a happy winter,
He in advance should pay the printer."

On the day the paper was published, Saturday, June 1, 1861, the country was rapidly drifting into Civil War. The South had organized a Confederate Government at Montgomery, Alabama, with Jefferson Davis as President. The rebels had seized all the United States forts in the South, the "Star of the West" had been fired upon, Fort Sumter had been captured on April 12, and on April 23, the rebel Secretary of War proclaimed their intention to attack the national capital, and boasted that the flag of the Confederacy would soon float over the Federal Capitol. A company of volunteers had been organized in Bristol, and the "Index" carries a story of a sword presentation made in Masonic Hall to Captain Thompson. This is the company which was afterward known as Company I, Third Pennsylvania Reserves, with Harry Clay Beatty as its Captain.

It is quite natural that the paper should give much space to the approaching conflict, and that some very caustic reference should be made to the Southern rebels. It was interesting to note the results of the vote which had been taken in Virginia, upon the question of the acceptance or rejection of the ordinance of secession. The interruption of the mails from Eastern Virginia, prevented the reception of the results of the vote from that section of the State, but official returns from the West, and some other portions, showed 21529 votes against secession and 4480 in favor.

Among the items of local interest was one about the Dorrance Fishery. It stated that on the previous day, 15,000 herring were caught at one haul. Can it be wondered at, that in those early days, Bristol should have acquired the nickname of "Herring Town"? Another item told of strawberries raised in the garden of J. Merrick Brown, at the corner of Pond and Market streets, one of which weighed over half an ounce, and two others a little less—the three together weighed half ounces net weight.

An article about the necessity for practicing economy is pertinent at this time. "But such is the general prostration of business that the failures in New York since the 22nd of April numbered over two hundred; and such is the quantity of protested paper, thrown on the banks, that they now refuse to accommodate. Real estate is unsalable, and rents are gone down because the people have no money to pay. The holders of breadstuffs will keep them up, because they know that the war and the demand in England will enable them to pay high prices. It is necessary, therefore, for all classes of citizens to practice economy."

Among the advertisements, is one of William Tabram, who dealt in second hand furniture and whose store was on Radcliffe street opposite Washington Hall. Another was Johnson's confectionery and ice cream saloon, at the corner of Mill and Cedar streets. Joseph Kinsey, it appears, was a manufacturer of wrought iron railings, and his place of business was on Cedar street one door above Masonic Hall. Wright and White conducted a coal yard at 25 Bath street. W. K. Kelly was the owner of an iron foundry on Wood street. Samuel and Harry Rue, were partners in an undertaking business on Mill street. Jacob McBrien's harness-making shop was at 77 Mill street. Samuel Pike conducted a hardware store on Radcliffe street, and L. P. Kinsey's hat and cap store was at No. 3 Mill street.

RED IS BECOMING FAVORITE IN PARIS SUMMER FASHIONS

By Alice Langeller

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS—Red is running riot all over the fashion capital these early summer days and giving an impression of warmth to this disagreeably cool season.

Hats are red, trimmings are the same. Several women have even been seen sporting bloody red gloves. Beads, belts and shoes come in all the warm red tints. Brilliant scarlet is one of the favorite shades and another is of even madder variety and is lovely for soft chiffons and evening muslins.

Polk-dots on a red ground make many sport accessories and red is put with green and navy, with black and white on marocain, satins and silks.

A new rust-red threatens to usurp the color calendar for early autumn wear. It makes a number of the very new velvet hats appearing at the smart modistes of the rue de la Paix.

The reds seem all but certain to oust the blues which have had such clear sailing since early spring, although a number of the smart set favored blue of some shade for the chic June races. Mrs. Richard McCroery wore navy-blue to the Chantilly meeting for the Prix de Diane, with a small blue hat trimmed in white and Countess Folke Bernadotte wore an ensemble of electric-blue.

The Baronne Robert de Rothschild also favored navy-blue with a large blue picture hat trimmed with long blue quill, but the Princess de Faucigny-Lucinge had coat and hat of lacquer-red.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

William Thomas Grier, 25, of 6212 Belfield avenue, Philadelphia, and Isabella Katherine Schwalm, 27, of Quakake, Pa.

Richard Crosby, 24, of 820 Jefferson street, Bristol, and Linda C. Jones, 19, of 808 Mansion street, Bristol; Earl Henry Heuckert, 23, of East Rockhill township, and Margaret Hannah Naudascher, 19, of Quakertown.

Chiffon for Evening

This lovely evening frock worn by Margaret Perry, M-G-M actress, is of black chiffon showing a square-cut neckline with a bow-knot pattern on the short-sleeved blouse outlined in rhinestones. The sleeves are held up by elastic bands that are edged with tiny flaring ruffles. The skirt flows from the knees to floor length fullness.

BRISTOL TWILIGHT LEAGUE

Schedule for Tonight

EDGELY vs. THIRD WARD

(Sullivan's Field)

Result of Last Night

ST. ANN'S, 10; INDEPENDENTS, 7

(By T. M. June)

The St. Ann's nine clinched fourth place in the Bristol Twilight League last night by beating the Independents, 10-7 in a slugfest on St. Ann's Field.

Six runs in the third inning put the game on ice for the Saints. In this inning for hits, two walks and a hit batsman did the trick with Antonelli on the mound for the Independents. Lasprella later relieved Antonelli.

The "Indies" scored a rally in the last frame which terminated with two runs scored and two men being left on the sacks. The losers outbit the winners, ten to seven and played better ball afield but the passes issued by Antonelli did his team a great deal of harm.

"Spike" Scordia hurried for the winners and though he was hit hard and his support was a little ragged he managed to pull out of the pinches nicely and score the win.

Tony Angelo was the heavy hitter of the night with two hits, a double and triple. E. Tosti and R. Tosti were the losers' best with two hits each.

OUR DAILY FOOD

By COLONEL GOODEBODY

A NUTTING PARTY DOWN IN GEORGIA

How would you like to be in Georgia, in a 1,400-acre grove of pecan trees, each tree 80 or 90 feet high, simply loaded with nuts. The husks have opened rapidly during the recent frosty days, and every time a breeze stirs, the nuts come rattling down.

Sounds like a small boy's dream of paradise, doesn't it?

Albany is just about the center of the pecan industry in Georgia, and that state is the leading producer of fine cultivated pecans. And that fact is all the more interesting because pecans are not native to Georgia. The original home of the pecan was the Mississippi valley. They weren't to be found anywhere else in the world until colonists began sending them to their friends in the old country.

In 1760, the botanist, John Bartram, of Philadelphia, wrote to a friend in London: "I have not yet been at the Ohio to hunt for the groves of the paccan, but have my specimens from there. In about two weeks I hope to set out to search myself, if the barbarous Indians don't hinder me. . . . And if I die a martyr to botany, then God's will be done."

But he did not die "a martyr to botany." He sent a sack of pecans to his English friend to be planted in the royal gardens in London. From then on there are all sorts of historical references to the nut. We find George Washington recording in his famous diary the planting of pecans between "white peaches from Philadelphia," in the garden at Mount Vernon—and later, of his experiments in grafting the pecan (or Illinois Nut, as he calls it) upon the hardier black walnut.

Pecan trees don't begin to bear fruit until they are ten or fifteen years old, but when they do start they keep right on for a century or more.

This year's crop is a fine one. The nuts are unusually large and free from blemish and they're pouring into market by the ton.

You know the approved method of harvesting is to gather the nuts just at the peak of ripeness, before they fall from the trees—to gather them by hand. A nimble picker, with a good long ladder, can gather about a hundred pounds a day. In well-managed groves the hand-picked nuts are separated from the "windfalls" for the windfalls often are slightly stained from their contact with the earth, and so bring a lower price.

Then the nuts are placed in curing racks, where they ripen for about two weeks. The curing racks, by the way, are nothing more than tier after tier of screens which allow free circulation of air between each two layers of nuts. After the pecans are graded, for size, color and weight—then they are ready for sale.

There never was a more satisfactory nibble for a traveler than a handful of pecans. And how surprisingly easy it is to crack them between the palms of your hands. You don't have to be a heavyweight champion to perform that trick.

Sensible of Honor

Mrs. Isabella Greenway, National Committeewoman from Arizona, seems pleased at the honor shown her by her name being considered as a possible Vice Presidential candidate, though she confessed she hadn't much hope of attaining such a high office. Mrs. Greenway has long been an active member of her State's political organization.

CANADIAN NEGRO HEAVYWEIGHT WHO DEFEATED CARNERA IN ENGLAND RECENTLY!

BURNLEY 6-30

YOU can go back in pugilistic history, even to the days of the Cestus in ancient Greece, and you will find that each decade boasted a so-called "Black Menace." In more modern days we find Jack Johnson traipsing all over the world in pursuit of the heavyweight champion, Tommy Burns, finally catching up with him in Australia. Burns, unable to longer refuse Johnson the match and loath to forego a $30,000 purse, consented to a meeting and lost, Johnson becoming the first and only negro heavyweight champion of the world.

Jess Willard defeated Johnson and in turn lost to Jack Dempsey. It was during the regime of Dempsey that the term "Black Menace" came into popular usage. Harry Wills, giant negro heavyweight of New Jersey, making himself a wealthy man by frequent and futile challenging for a title match, Dempsey was willing but conditions prevented promoters from attempting to stage the bout. In Tunney's time there was another dark cloud on the pugilistic horizon, Big George Godfrey, famed as the "Black Shadow of Leiper-ville." And now there looms another "Black Menace" in the capable person of Larry Gains, Canadian heavyweight who recently lambasted the giant Primo Carnera in London.

Gains is no tryer in this boxing game. Back in 1925 he scored a technical knockout over the present heavyweight champion of the world, Max Schmeling. He is a big, well-formed man, weighing about 200 pounds. He did most of his fighting, a few years back, up around Toronto and Montreal and has appeared several times in Madison Square Garden, New York, without causing much excitement. More recently he has been fighting in Europe and they look upon him over there as one of the best big men in the game.

While not a heavy hitter, Gains is a very clever boxer and is known to the trade as "a hard guy to fight." He has fought Big George Godfrey several times, winning their last fight back in 1928 in three rounds on a foul. Previously Godfrey had knocked him out twice, once in five rounds and again in six. Gains was little more than a lightweight at the time and had to concede the Leiper-ville Shadow plenty of weight. Larry has beaten Jack Renault, Jack Gagnon and Charley Belanger among the better-known fighters here, and in Europe he scored a knockout victory over Phil Scott, thereby gathering in some sort of claim on the British heavyweight championship.

His victory over Carnera will undoubtedly result in his being matched for important bouts in this country, so we shall soon know more of this newest shadow on the pugilistic horizon.

Boy Tennis Marvel in Action

Following his sensational triumph over George Lott, America's second ranking tennis player, Frankie Parker (above) of Milwaukee, Wis., has attracted attention from the powers that be in the racket world. Though only 16 years old, Frankie shows exceptional promise and may look forward to a spot in future Davis Cup teams. He is shown in a typical action pose as he leaps for a high one.
